Why don't we just declare a state of emergency?

We did it for the pandemic and my understanding was that it really didn't become useful until we started do vaccinations almost a year later. It's symbolic but at least it adds some form of gravitas to the situation and I can see a lot of councillors at least wanting this.

Is there anything at all out of this hot mess that can be salvaged?

The city cannot implement a by-law that would violate Charter rights (re demonstration posters, banners, etc).

We will liaise with Clerk and Legal on this.
